Couple Forced From Machine And Robbed

COUPLE FORCED FROM CAR, ROBBED, AND CAR TAKEN BY THREE ARMED MEN, ACCORDING TO STORY TOLD TO ANDALUSIA CONSTABLE

Diamond Ring Taken from Girl's Stocking and Wallet With $22 from Man Companion—Three Highway Men Got Into Car As Couple Emerged from Restaurant on Boulevard—Told Car Would Be Returned An Hour Later.

ANDALUSIA, Feb. 3.—Another alleged hold-up and robbery occurred in Bucks County last night, according to Constable Oliver, who states that a man and a woman were forced from their car and relieved of their possessions, between Andalusia and Cornwells Heights, shortly before midnight.

Harry Chilik, 2649 Jasper street, Philadelphia, accompanied by a lady friend, Marie McMenamin, 621 East Westmoreland street, Philadelphia, left the Mastbaum School, Frankford avenue and Somerset street, Frankford, last evening and decided to take a ride in the new car of Chilik. They drove up the Boulevard and stopped at a restaurant for lunch. As they emerged from the restaurant the couple claims they were met by three armed men who forced them into the car and to occupy the rear seat. The three highwaymen occupied the front seat of the machine.

The five then drove up the Bristol Pike. The young woman slipped her diamond ring off her finger and into her stocking while the man managed to get his wrist watch pushed down between the cushions of the car seat. He could not get his wallet from his pocket.

When the quintet reached a lonely spot along the road Chilik and his girl friend were told to get out of the machine. The pair was thoroughly searched and the ring removed from the girl's stocking and Chilik's wallet with $22 taken.

The couple were told to be at the Red Lion Bridge, Torresdale, in about an hour and they would find their car there.

Chilik inquired of Mr. Mowbray, Station Lane, here, where he could locate an officer and referred to Constable Oliver. Oliver took the couple back to Torresdale but the car was not to be found. The two were turned over to the Philadelphia police to see that they reached their homes safely.

BILLS BEFORE BOTH HOUSES

By Robert F. Gorman
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, Feb. 3.—Although proposing to attack the problem from two exactly opposite angles both houses of the legislature today have a full opportunity to advance the proposed investigation of the Public Service Commission.

The House has before it a resolution introduced by W. Glenn Moore, Washington, which would make Governor Gifford Pinchot a party to the proposed probe. Under it the investigation would be conducted by a committee of nine members. Three of the committee would be appointed by the president pro tempore of the Senate, three by the speaker of the House and three by Governor Pinchot.

Under the Earnest resolution as reported from the judiciary general committee, without amendment, the commission investigation would be strictly a legislative function. The committee which the resolution would create would be made up of members of the judiciary general committees of the two houses.

The Earnest resolution carries an appropriation of $20,000 for the work of the commission while that sponsored by Rep. Moore is accompanied by a companion measure proposing $100,000 for the probe.

Anti-administration senators are credited with backing the Earnest resolution while that which Moore is sponsoring is believed to have originated in the Governor's office.

The Moore resolution is labelled an administration measure. It is understood that it was prepared with the approval of the Governor and given to Rep. Moore for presentation.

The committee it sets up would elect its own chairman and secretary, and five members would constitute a quorum. The measure provides that hearings begin not later than Wednesday of each week following passage of the resolution and continue until a conclusion can be reached. The chairman of the committee is authorized to issue subpoenas under his seal, service to be carried out by the sergeant-at-arms of either the Senate or House, or both.

The Moore resolution was accompanied by a companion bill appropriating $100,000 for carrying out the proposals in the resolution. This sum would be used to pay witness fees, travel expenses, clerks, stenographers, expert accountants and others. Members of the committee would serve without pay, but would be allowed travelling expenses.

Morrisville Scouts Receive Their Charter

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 3.—Presentation of the charter to Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts, featured the evening service held Sunday night in the First Presbyterian Church. Members of the Presbyterian Troop, as well as representatives from other troops and the Sea Scouts attended. The service was in charge of the Troop Committee of this church.

Albert M. White, Troop Commissioner of Morrisville, made the presentation and he also read the charges to the Troop Committee and the scoutmaster of the charter. White presented the certificates to the Troop Committee which is composed of Carlton B. Hughes, Charles L. Metz, William B. Anderson, the Rev. L. V. C. Mytton and E. C. McClanahan, and to the scoutmaster, William Schofield, Jr.

Following the charter ceremonies Robert X. Perry, assistant Scout Executive of Bucks County, delivered an interesting address on "Scouting." Mr. Perry described the organization of scouting in America and added that next Sunday the scout movement in this county will be 21 years old. He stated there are 25,000 troops and between four and five million boys and leaders affiliated with scouting. There are 57 troops in Bucks county.

Walter Rogalski, 39, Employed by James White, Fails to Give Any Reason for His Actions—Was Seen Standing in Field Nearby Watching the Miller Fire—Taken Into Custody Yesterday

HULMEVILLE, Feb. 3.—A pyromaniac is in the clutches of the law.

He is: Walter Rogalski, 39 years of age, a farm-hand in the employ of James White, Hulmeville Road, Bensalem Township.

Confession was made at an early hour this morning by Rogalski to firing the barns on the farms of Mrs. Margaret Martin Yorke and Miss Mary Miller. The confession was gained only after intense investigation of several days on the part of Corporal Dean and Officer Harry Christ, of the Morrisville State Police barracks, and Bucks County Fire Marshal William L. Stackhouse, of this borough, which investigation was followed last evening and on into the early morning hours by a stiff grilling of Rogalski who was taken into custody yesterday.

Following his confession to starting the Yorke and Miller fires, which resulted in heavy losses of cattle, grains, machinery and buildings, Rogalski was placed under arrest on a charge of arson. He will be taken to the county jail at Doylestown today.

Scouts Wish Transportation Assistance to Doylestown

All Boy Scouts of Troop 2 will meet in the parish house of St. James' Church at 10.30 next Sunday, from which point they will go to the church adjoining for morning service. This will be one of the affairs that will mark anniversary week for this troop. Scouts will be fully uniformed for the service.

These boys are desirous that all parents who can possibly do so attend the annual court of honor at Doylestown on Sunday next at 2.30 p. m. Those who can furnish transportation for the Scouts are asked to communicate with Troop 2, Scoutmaster David Neill.

DEEP SEA DIVER TO ADDRESS FATHERS HERE

Frank Crilley Will Be Speaker at Meeting on February 12th

INVITE ALL MEN TO IT

The Fathers' Association has secured a speaker for its next meeting, to be held on Thursday evening, February 12, which every member of the organization will want to hear.

His name is Frank Crilley, the deep sea diver, who will accompany Sir Hubert Wilkins in the submarine O-12 on his proposed trip to the North Pole, under the ice in the Arctic Ocean, which will be one of the most fantastic adventures in maritime history since the voyage of Columbus.

Crilley is called "the world's best diver." He holds the world's depth record—399 feet—and is possessor of a Congressional Medal for rescuing a trapped diver at Honolulu. Crilley, with his companion, Joseph Drury, both navy veterans, will descend through a hatch in an airtight chamber in the fore peak of the submarine. By filling this chamber with an air pressure equal to the sea pressure at that point, the men will be able to open the hatch and step into the water as if they were stepping into a bathtub.

They will have underwater movie cameras, with which, with the aid of their powerful light, they will photograph underwater life, if any, or anything else they deem interesting enough to take to the folks back home.

Crilley and his companion also will be expected to perform repairs on the outside hull whenever necessary, remove any obstructions in the boat's path and carry out rescue operations if necessary.

The submarine is expected to "shove off" for the northern waters in June. Scientific discovery is the purpose of the voyage. Air will be sucked through the ice crust at frequent intervals. This ship is equipped with two telescopic drills long enough to penetrate 75 feet of ice.

After the drills reach the atmosphere one of the holes will be used to suck in air, while the Diesel engines are charging the batteries. The other will carry off the exhaust. Air will be compressed in this manner also for breathing purposes and for "blowing out" the ballast tanks, which cause the ship to sink or float.

For exploring the floor of the Arctic Sea, the "sub" will carry a 5,000-watt undersea light, the largest ever devised. This light will be affixed to the end of the bow-sprit and will enable the ship's divers, Crilley and Drury, to find their way about.

Crilley will be accompanied to Bristol by Ray Myers, who is to be the chief electrician on the trip. Both men will address the meeting and explain everything of interest about the proposed trip.

The opportunity to hear these men is something which seldom comes to a small town like Bristol, and the high school auditorium should be filled to capacity on that occasion.

SUPREME COURT BANS PIGGERS IN WARRINGTON

Affirms Judgment of Bucks County Court in The Case

HAD NEARLY 800 PIGS

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 3.—(INS)—The Supreme Court yesterday in a per curiam opinion affirmed the judgment of the Bucks County Court in granting an injunction of petition of the Commonwealth restraining Roman and Anna Soboleski from keeping a piggery on their premises in Warrington Township, near Bethayres.

The complaint was that the sanitary regulations of the Department of Health were not complied with and that the pens, which contained from 550 to 750 pigs constituted a public nuisance.

The evidence showed that a brook which empties into Pennypack Creek, the waters of which are pumped and used for public purposes, were contaminated; also that proper care was not taken to prevent the breeding of flies and vermin, and the dissemination of odors offensive to the neighborhood.

Rogalski stated to the fire marshal and the officers that on the night of January 10th, while seated in the store of a friend, Mr. Myers, on Hulmeville Road, he decided to set fire to the Yorke barn. He went to the White farm where he was employed and donned his heavy overcoat. Going through the Yorke stable he made his way to the upper floor, and there striking a match he threw it into a pile of hay. Rogalski states he then closed the door, and walked to the corner of the Hulmeville and Bristol roads, nearby, where he waited for about 10 minutes. An automobile passed and stopped at

MEASURED IN MILES

Suppose for a moment that advertising didn't exist—that there were no trade-marked goods—that everything you bought had to be judged by its look or feel or taste.

Imagine yourself setting out to do the morning's shopping under such conditions. You'd drive down the street, looking in windows for the articles you needed—the blouses for Johnny, the half-dozen bath towels, the toilet soap, the groceries for tomorrow's meals. You'd stop, ask questions, examine the towels, smell the soap, wonder if here was your money's worth or if you might find something better farther on. And though you followed this procedure mile after weary mile, you could never be sure.

Computed simply in terms of gasoline and tires and shoe-leather, advertising saves you a startling sum every year. And if you add the value of your time, the amount is vastly increased.

When you buy a product that is advertised you know in advance what you will get, how much it costs, and where you can obtain it. That is why, in millions of modern homes, the newspaper advertising columns are a daily guide to purchases.

Read the advertisements, decide what you need, then buy with assurance.

James Angelina and George Giano Admit Guilt to Court

ROBBED "GAS" STATION

Bristol Man Says He Was Crazy When He Struck Officer

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 3.—James Angelina and George Giano, of Bristol, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Boyer to a charge of robbing Arthur Saporita, a Bristol gasoline station operator on the night of January 21.

They held up Saporita at the point of a gun and then robbed the cash register of $50.

The boys were each sentenced to serve from 7 to 14 years at hard labor in the Eastern Penitentiary, and were severely lectured by Judge Boyer.

George Stevens, 48, of 248 Cleveland street, Bristol, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Boyer to a charge of assault and battery upon George Pollard, a Bristol police officer.

Stevens said he had never been arrested before and when he was placed in the Bristol jail he became scared and thought he was going to be shot. He said that he had been drinking and that while his "right senses" had left him he "took a pass at the officer."

"What I need now is fresh air and nothing more," Stevens told Judge Boyer after an officer of the county prison had informed the Court that Stevens had been well-behaved since his incarceration there. A sentence of 30 days was imposed but later suspended.

WANTED TO SEE THINGS

Lucille Layton, 14, Colored, of Bristol, Runs Away From Home

Garbed in male clothing, Lucille Layton, 14, colored, was found by police authorities in Frankford this morning, and taken to a nearby house of detention.

Lucille, who had attended sessions at Bath street school yesterday, as usual, is supposed to have left her home at an early hour last evening. No special reason can be given by her father, Frederick Layton, of 910 Spring street, or her aunt, Mrs. Charles Layton, 801 Pine street, as to her motive for leaving home.

It is presumed that the child wore some of her father's clothes.

The young girl, known to many by her bright face and ready smile, had not attended school last week, but according to the teachers offered a good excuse. She put in an appearance yesterday morning at her class room, where she is a member of the seventh grade. Lunch was partaken of at the home of Mrs. Charles Layton, where both the father and daughter were accustomed to take their meals. At about 4.30 o'clock in the afternoon Lucille stopped at the Pine street residence and talked for a few minutes with her aunt. She was invited back to dinner, after her work at her own home was completed. Her reply was to the effect that she was not sure if she would return or not. This, however, was not looked upon in a strange light by the aunt.

Mrs. Charles Layton went to the Spring street house at eight o'clock to visit Lucille, but the place was in darkness. Making her way upstairs the woman found Lucille's clothing that she had been wearing that day in the closet. All through the night the family wondered where the child was, hoping for her return.

It was not until this morning, when the girl was located in Frankford, that the relatives realized what had happened. Mr. Layton had not missed any of his clothing, not thinking that

EXPECT LARGE CROWD TO HEAR BOWERY BISHOP

Neshaminy M. E. Church Likely to Be Taxed to Capacity

SPECIAL MUSIC, TOO

HULMEVILLE, Feb. 3.—It is not expected that the Neshaminy M. E. Church will hold the crowd that desires to hear Rev. John Callahan, "Bishop of the Bowery," when he speaks in that edifice on Sunday afternoon next, February 8th.

The famous "Irish orator," who for the past 39 years has labored to save human beings from the "scrap heap," is scheduled to address the fifth meeting in a series for men at three o'clock. This meeting, however, is to be an open one, and men, women and children are expected in great number.

Rev. Callahan, known and beloved by thousands, is the leader of the Hadley Rescue Hall on the Bowery, and chaplain of Tombs Prison in which he was once a prisoner.

The ministry of this man who works day and night in an effort to save the souls of those who are down and out, is based on a sympathetic understanding of such men and women. He is an enthusiastic, gripping speaker, who has addressed audiences numbering 10,000.

Special musical numbers are always arranged for these meetings, and the Harmony Trumpeters will furnish instrumental selections at this meeting. These trumpeters have on several previous occasions visited this borough, and their programs are always eagerly looked forward to.

Selections are to be given by Mrs. Jennie Halk, and H. Douglass LeCompte, both vocalists of merit.

TWO BARN AND CHICKEN HOUSE GO UP IN FLAMES

Warrington Hotel Barn Loss is Estimated at $2500

WOLF BARN BURNED

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 3.—Fire losses in Bucks county continued to increase over the week-end at a rapid rate, when two barns and a large chicken house in different sections of the county were destroyed by fires, two of which were of undetermined origin.

Saturday night about 10.15 the large barn in the rear of the Warrington Inn, at Warrington, was destroyed by fire that quickly spread over the structure so that firemen from Doylestown, Warrington and Horsham, who answered the call, were unable to save it.

The Warrington barn is one of the oldest in this section of Bucks county. For many years it was used as a town hall for the Warrington community and lodge meetings and other public gatherings were held there. It is owned by Quartiglia Ferrero, whose residence is nearby.

Had the firemen been there when the fire started there would have been little chance of saving the building because of the lack of water supply in the Warrington section.

Furniture stored in the Warrington barn and an automobile were burned. Other buildings nearby were threatened for a time until the wind changed. The loss is estimated at $2500.

Sunday afternoon about 4 o'clock a barn on the Walter Wolf farm at Pebble Hill was destroyed by fire that started in a field nearby. The farm is occupied by Margaret Tomlinson. A small girl living at the place was returning from Sunday School when she noticed the fire in the grass near the barn. She tried herself to extinguish

EUROPE'S PROBLEM

Washington hesitates to name the president for the world disarmament conference to be held a year hence because it is uncertain whether the League of Nations council was entirely sincere in its professed desire to honor the United States by permitting an American to preside.

The State Department feels that it would be a rather dubious honor and that the council extended the invitation for other reasons than to flatter Uncle Sam. It does not, however, suspect diplomatic dishonesty or a desire to compromise any nation.

Europe's position plainly is the United States will be the one neutral at the next conference. The European nations upon whom disarmament will fall most heavily are deeply involved with one another in politics, and the principal objective of the conference will be the breaking of the French military hegemony in Continental Europe.

The forthcoming conference will deal with land armaments, the reduction of which cannot possibly affect the United States whose army has been reduced to an irreducible minimum. That is Europe's trouble and it is a question whether the United States should commit itself in the matter, unless the French and their allies are willing to revise their system of European military domination.

The other side of the question is that experience has shown that if disarmament is to come about pressure must be brought to bear from Washington.

MEXICO'S GRIEVANCE

In view of the manifest desire of the Mexican government and people to cultivate cordial relations with the United States, and in view of the enlightened policy of President Ortiz Rubio, ably supported by Ambassador Tellez, it is more than ever necessary that the United States should refrain from any act that could be construed as unfair to the Mexican nation. Mexico's rights must be respected if we expect her to respect our rights.

An unfortunate lack of tact was shown by Senator Ashurst when he suggested that the United States negotiate with Mexico for the purchase of Lower California and a portion of Sonora. It was inevitable that both the Government and people of Mexico would scornfully repel any suggestion that the national domain is subject to barter. Americans would consider such a suggestion from a foreign country an insult demanding formal apology.

Another sore spot between the two neighbors is the Black Canyon dam project. Mexico has declared her rights to a share of the resources lying in the Colorado River which she believes jeopardized by the construction of the dam and subsequent diversion of water. International law is unmistakably on the side of the neighboring republic.

May Washington do nothing to needlessly terminate the long reign of friendship established by Senator Morrow. Certainly the question can be arbitrated to the satisfaction of both sides.

A Chicago doctor says sweeping is the best exercise for women, but the only sweeping most women now is down a theater aisle.

"FOREST LOVE" by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Becoming cynical at her mother's wish to have her marry for wealth, Nancy Hollenbeck, young and beautiful, accepts the ardent attentions of Jack Beamer, who is married to a wealthy invalid. On a mountain trip, Nancy, after a brief courtship, marries Roger Decatur, a ranger, Sicken- ing of the loneliness, with Roger away, she returns home to resume her old life, still keeping her marriage a secret. When Roger, deeply in love with Nancy, comes to take her back, she tells him un- less he makes his home in the city, she will divorce him, although she realizes her own love for him. She confides in her grandmother, who gives her financial aid. After Roger leaves, Nancy continues her clandestine affair with Beamer, whose wife refuses to free him. Louise, Nancy's sister, always second with men, now has a rich, though elderly, suitor. Beamer takes Nancy to his farm on a jaunt. Mrs. Beamer unex- pectedly arrives and Nancy is bundled into the kitchen.

CHAPTER XL.

BUT she wouldn't sit down. She insisted upon going to her room—the room Nancy had left a few short moments ago—to freshen herself before dinner. Well, he couldn't stop her. He lit a cigarette and waited. There would be a scene. He grinned a little, thinking of that. Harder on her than him. Her own fault if she got all worked up; the doctor had warned her often enough. If she'd only think it was some other woman . . . if he could only keep Nancy out of it. . . . Nancy heard her screaming through the thick walls of the sturdy little cottage. She couldn't distinguish the words, but she knew what had happened. Mrs. Beamer had found out.

The Chinaman came in and out of the kitchen with trays. His ex- pression never changed. When he opened the door into the hall Nancy could hear the voices quite distinctly. The woman was weep- ing hysterically. Jack was cursing. "Dinner ready!" The Chinaman put a tray for Nancy on the edge of the kitchen table.

"Thank you," she smiled, but she could not eat.

"You want something else?" the cook inquired solicitously after a while.

Lost Love.

She shook her head. She didn't want anything. Anything she could have. She doubted if she would ever want anything again. Not even Jack. . . or his money. . . .

If she could only talk to Roger . . . explain. . . if she only had to do over again! But she'd had her chance and she'd muffed it. Twice! You couldn't expect more than that from life. . . . two chances. . . .

It was dark now, black outside the windows. Her warm inside, warm and hot. The wood range roared, the electric lights burned bright in the white-painted kitchen. Nancy's head went on aching, if she could only smuggle into Roger's arms. . . . just once. . . . it would be so comfortable. . . . now. . . . in all her trouble. . . .

The kitchen door opened and a young man in riding boots and a slouch hat stuck his head in. "Mr. Beamer says not to worry, and I'll give you home as soon as they're gone, today."

Worry! Nancy almost smiled. Worry! About what? What was there left to worry about? She had no fear of losing Jack. You never lose what you don't want. He could find some way of protecting her, of placating his wife. They'd be married. She'd be mistress here. . . . She would ride Moon Maid whenever she wanted to. . . . Drive Jack's cars. . . .

She'd lost love. Very well, she'd have the other things, the things the world wants. She'd have 'em, even if she hated them, and Jack Beamer, too!

Out in the yard a motor was starting. Jack's probably. . . . Jack was taking his wife home. . . . The young man of the slouch hat came back. "We can go now, lady."

Under lowered lids he watched her furtively while she pulled on her coat. . . .

Jack Beamer, never a cautious driver, drove like a demon tonight. Once the car skidded on a curve and Anita screamed.

"I'll let you know when to yell!" he said brutally, but he slackened the speed, nevertheless. If any- thing did happen it would be just his luck to get bumped off, and Anita, of course, would escape with one cut and two bruises.

Horses Again.

Tough. You couldn't kill her! She had the worst case of hyster- ics he had ever seen in his life, and look at her now! Alive and worrying about skidding. Afraid she wouldn't live to be eighty. . . . Eighty. . . . God! Suppose she did. . . . suppose that weak heart of hers went right on beating. . . . And he was tied to her. . . . stuck with her. . . . If he got the divorce he'd be penniless. . . . Pengless! He still remembered what Jack was like; no more of THAT, thank you. . . .

In the light of the Jackson Street drawing room, where he deposited her at last, he thought she looked rather gray and hag- gard.

His heart warmed to her. . . . Maybe she'd die after all. "A glass of sherry for Ma- dame," he told Maxwell, kindly.

She smiled at him wanly, and he had a glass or two with her and felt better himself.

"Jack, dear." She took his warm hand in her cold, lifeless one. "Jack, dear, I'm sorry I made a scene."

He kicked at the rug. "I hate scenes. I've told you that."

"I know—I know, dear. I promise—I swear I'll never do it again."

"Until the next time!"

"No—never. Not if you prom- ise not to leave me, to shame me before people."

"I'm not leaving you, am I?"

"Jack, I'm so unhappy. . . . couldn't we take a trip somewhere together, dear?"

If she'd only learn not to cry all the time! She looked such a mess with her mouth twitching like a rabbit's and her eyes all red. And now she wanted to go on a trip. . . . God! A trip. . . . after all these years. . . .

Something of what he was thinking must have showed in his face, for she buried her head in her arms and cried loudly, unre- strainedly, like a child.

Devouring him, hungrily, beseech- ing? Didn't she know he hated tears? To think that now, after planning his freedom, counting on it. . . . that he should be stuck like this. . . .

"I know—you think I'm too old now, you'll be glad when I'm dead."

Dead. There she went again. Reminding him. . . .

He went to the window, opened it, letting in a rush of cold air. "What makes you think that?" he asked hoarsely.

"You make it plain enough. . . . the way you treat me!" But she stopped crying. Her eyes were devouring him, hungrily, beseech- ingly.

"You're off your chop. Froth a purely selfish viewpoint. Since you choose to consider me a fortune hunter—"

"No, no—I never said—I never thought—"

"Oh, yes, you do. You've made it plain enough that if we separate I'm left a pauper."

"Oh. . . if we separate. . . but. . ."

"Well, then, am I likely to want you to bump off and. . ."

He stopped to pour and gulp another glass of sherry, his throat was so dry. . . . and lose my meal ticket. . . . since I'm not credited with any human feeling in the matter?"

"Oh, but you didn't think I'd cut you off without—without—"

"I'm not thinking."

"But, dear. . . I want you to know. . . if anything should happen to me. . . why. . . it's all yours, dear? Who else. . . who else would I. . ."

She was weeping again, sobbing loudly. Picturing her own funeral, no doubt, seeing the mourners, the banks of filies. . . . Poor Anita. . . . poor old girl! Jack's eyes flamed, too. He said, huskily, "Don't talk about it. Why you. . . you're strong. . . I am. . . why I. . . I can't talk about it."

She lifted red eyes. Saw tears in his. . . . tears for her. . . .

"Jack, dear—you do care. . . you do still!"

He put his arms around her then, patted her awkwardly. What else could he do? He had to make it up to her some way. . . . good old Anita, leaving everything to him. . . . He did appreciate it. . . . he couldn't help thinking. . . . plan- ning. . . . she couldn't last long, not if she. . . .

"And we will go on a trip?" she crooned, clinging close, sickening him again. . . .

A trip. . . . what was that Nancy said about the High Sierras. . . . steep trails. . . . accidents. . . .

"You wouldn't go where I want to go," he said, roughly, pushing her away. Mustn't think those thoughts. . . . mustn't think. . . .

"Dear, I'd go anywhere. . . I'm so much stronger now than I was. . . I can do anything—truly—"

"Yosemite—"

"Jack, I'd love it! I'd adore it. Try me. See if I—"

"A riding trip, I mean. You wouldn't go. You couldn't stand it. Altitude. Dangerous. Liable to break your neck!" There, he'd said it. He'd warned her. . . .

Horses! Her jaw dropped. She was afraid of horses.

When she did not answer he knew how much he had counted on. . . . on something happening to her. . . . "There—what did I tell you? I wouldn't go with you any- way. A lot of fun I'd have with you blubbering, wanting to turn back, afraid of your own shadow. . . ."

Bitter Thoughts.

He went and stood by the win- dows again, so that the cool air touched his feverish head.

After a long time she said "Take me. I won't bother you I promise."

She meant it. There was more than promise in her faded, dog- gish eyes. . . . courage. . . . She intended to go through with it, he saw that.

It was his turn to hesitate.

"Oh, hell! What's the use?"

"But, Jack, I mean it—please let me—please—please—"

"It's too early now, anyway."

"But later—later in the Spring."

"Oh, all RIGHT!" He wiped his damp forehead with a purple- crested handkerchief. He couldn't help it if she insisted. . . .

Her arms closed round him again. He found he could stand it by shutting his eyes and thinking of Nancy.

He telephoned Monday morn- ing. A long, nerve-wracking con- versation, with Nancy holding the telephone wearily, whispering into it. "Yes, I know. . . . no, it wasn't your fault. . . . I got home all right. . . . No, I'm not angry."

And she wasn't angry, that was the funny part. Just tired and sick and humiliated. In his own way Jack Beamer loved her, she knew that. There was no real malice or trickery in his lying about the Garfields. He simply knew that she would have refused to come without Mrs. Garfield or someone else there, and he lied to remove the objection. His wife coming upon them was just "a bad break" to him. He had no conception of her shame at being bundled off into a kitchen, forced to hide. His feelings weren't fine enough for that. . . . well, you can't have everything. . . . She sat there holding the telephone, lost in bitter thought.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By NANCY LEE

DEAR NANCY LEE: Will you kindly give me some advice on a situation as follows:

Several months ago I met a fellow for whom I learned to care. He is all a fellow any girl would ask for. I was thrilled when he asked me to answer his letter to me. He showed all signs that he cared for me and I can truthfully say that I cared for him and still do. He stopped writing for which I could find no explanation.

A few weeks ago girl friends of mine went to a show out of town and saw him there. Last week these girls took me to this place without me knowing the reason, for you see they did not tell me they had seen him. There were three of us. When he saw us he tried to hide. Finally, while one of my girl friends and I were at one part of the theatre the other girl who was with us went to him and he spoke to her. Later the other one went over and he spoke to her, but would not speak to me. He told them that he had played a dirty trick on me for stopping our correspondence. He said that I was too good for him and that his past was "dark and dreary," whatever that means. Nancy Lee, I can say I really love him and his past means nothing to me.

I am a girl 21 and should know my mind as to whether it is true or not.

Do you think it is wrong for me to write and tell him how I feel about it all for I do want to hear from him, if not see him. Nancy Lee, what would you suggest? I

L: You certainly seem to have met a very strange young man, one who seems to revel in his misery. Since your friends have interceded in the affair, why not have a talk with them and perhaps they could talk with the young man and tell him that they know how much you enjoyed his friendship and the exchange of correspondence. If he makes no move after that, well, I think that it would be better to dismiss all thoughts of the young man.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am a young girl of 16 and considered quite popular among my friends. I am now going with a young man who lives in a town not far from my home. He comes to see me every Saturday and Sunday and sometimes during the week. I like this young man very much but my mother thinks I am entirely too young to keep company, although all my girl friends have their boy friends. This boy is very nice but please tell me how I can get my mother to consent to my going with him.

FLIPPANT NANCY: The young man know that you are but a girl and that reason is no doubt sufficient to prevent him from treating you as an avowed sweetheart. It is so easy when one is young to mistake a deep friendship for love and the young man might be most astonished if he guessed the depth of your feeling for him. Let us hope that the friendship will later on ripen into love. In the meantime enjoy a nice friendship, provided that it has the sanction of your family.

Bowen, of Pleasantville, N. J.

Dr. and Mrs. Mark E. Morgan, formerly of Bristol, now of Narberth, Miss Elizabeth Hussey, of Bayonne, N. J., and Francis Sanford Merrill, of Allendale, N. J., passed the week-end at the home of Mrs. Morgan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Hussey, of Dorrance street.

Miss Henrietta Davis, who is a student at Swarthmore College, passed the week-end at her home on Otter street.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mills, of 355 East Circle, had as a guest over the week-end, Henry Shields, of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schumann, of Trenton, N. J., were guests during last week of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boehrer, of Newportville.

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Zimmerman, of 360 East Circle, entertained on Sunday, Mr. Zimmerman's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McGurk, of Philadelphia.

Two Barns and Chicken House Go Up in Flames

The flames, but failed. She then ran into the house and notified her sister, but by that time the flames had reached the barn.

One cow was saved, but all the hay and farm machinery was destroyed. A man who was visiting at the place suffered considerably from burns of the hand when he rushed into the barn to save the cow. The loss here is estimated at $3,000. The Doylestown Fire Company answered the call.

For the first time since the Dublin Fire Company provided two large wells to supply the community with water in case of fire, the company about 5 o'clock Sunday was called upon to take its supply from this source.

Late in the afternoon the firemen received a call to fight a fire in a two-story poultry house on the former Jacob Angeny farm, now owned by Mrs. Ritter. It is believed the fire was caused by a brooder stove which had been started earlier in the day preparatory to receiving 1200 chicks today.

The fire was confined to the middle portion of the 30 by 100 foot structure and through their efforts, the firemen succeeded in saving a portion of the building.

In a part of the poultry house were several hundred laying hens which perished in the flames. Fire Chief Lloyd Crouthamel stated this morning that the loss will amount to about $1000.

We have been here "doing business at the old stand" for several generations. So, when we recommend Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite, we speak from experience, and with a reputation to protect.

Why Commute?

Why travel back and forth to your employment, which is here in Bristol, when such desirable dwellings are to be obtained here at such reasonable rents? It will pay any individual to investigate!

Work Where You Live and Live Where You Work.

If you are employed in Bristol you should live here. It will be less expensive and there are numerous other advantages derived from making your home in the town where you are employed.

You will save many hours a year which are now spent in traveling and you will have more time with your family.

The saving in money will also be considerable. Add to that which you are now paying for rent the amount which you spend in traveling back and forth to your employment here. You'll be surprised at the total. Rent a house here at a moderate rental and bank the difference.

Houses.

Comfortable dwellings, well situated and at moderate rents are to be found in that portion of Bristol which is immediately adjacent to the P. R. R. passenger station.

These houses make ideal homes and consist of six rooms with bath.

Conveniences.

They are heated by hot-air furnaces with a direct pipe leading to every room. They are lighted with electricity and are equipped with sewer, municipal water and gas.

Each room is well lighted and yet the space devoted to windows is not excessive.

Front porches are another attractive feature as is also a small rear yard where children can play in safety away from the perils of traffic.

Houses such as these would rent for considerably more in any city, where the conveniences would not surpass those offered here.

NAT'L LEAGUE OWNERS IN SPRING SESSION

By Les Conklin
I. N. S. Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—While six more weeks of tough weather was indicated yesterday when Br'er Groundhog saw his shadow, unmistakable signs of spring were forthcoming on the baseball horizon today.

For one thing, the National League Club owners hold their annual "spring" meeting here today. For another, two prominent stars, Hack Wilson and Herb Pennock, have deserted the ranks of the hold-outs.

Wilson met Bill Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, in Pittsburgh yesterday, and signed a one-year contract. The conference was clouded by a haze of mystery as thick as the city's smoke, as the amount of the home run king's salary was not revealed.

As a hold-out, Hack has been an utter failure, and a disappointment to the charter members of the hot stove league who have been robbed of one of their choicest conversational subjects. Such hardy perennials as Al Simmons, Dazzy Vance, Babe Herman or Babe Ruth would never commit an anti-climax by agreeing to terms at this early date.

Wilson, who previously was reported as demanding $40,000 a year, is said to have come to terms for slightly more than $30,000. The roly-poly outfielder is still out of Babe Ruth's class as a drawing card and financier.

Pennock did not actually sign a contract with the Yankees, but came to an understanding. The veteran southpaw will report at the St. Petersburg training camp with the other pitchers on February 22.

The hold-out situation in the New York sector remains acute, however. Bill Terry, Fred Lindstrom and Johnny Vergez, rookie third baseman from Oakland on the Pacific coast, are dissatisfied with the Giants' terms. Terry, who batted .401 last season only to receive a 1931 document calling for the same salary as last year, may get a real offer from the club today.

The dissatisfied Yankees are Lou Gehrig, Lyn Lary and Meryl Hoag. Vance, Herman and Ernie Lombardi, another Oakland rookie, are still outside of the Brooklyn fold.

Five of Cleveland's best players are unsigned. This has led to a report from Chicago that Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's pitching ace, and Lew Fonseca, hard-hitting utility infielder of the Indians, might be traded to the White Sox for Pitcher Ted Lyons and Willie Kamm, veteran third baseman.

Incidentally, it developed at the International League meeting here yesterday that the three big minor leagues have a flock of holdouts because of their action in limiting a club's payroll to $66,000. This has led to salary cuts and agonized protests all along the line.

After passing on the schedule today, the National League magnates may discuss a test of a non-lively ball to be conducted at the Florida training camps. The teams may try out a new ball with a thicker cover and stitches designed to enable pitchers to get a firmer grip on the horsehide. If the ball answers its purpose and is officially adopted, pitchers will be able to curb the homerun orgy considerably.

Confesses He Fired Two Barns Causing $30,000 Loss

a nearby house, and it was then the blaze could be seen. People commenced to arrive from all directions, and fire sirens started to shriek. Rogalski went back to the barn and helped to save the pigs.

Again on the night of January 28th, while seated in the Myers' store, Rogalski says he decided to start a second fire, this time choosing the barn on the Miller place. He went home for his heavy coat, and when nearing the chosen spot, made his way across the fields to the Miller barn. In his statement he told that he went to the rear of the structure where he opened a door, struck a match and started the blaze among some wheat straw which was close to the cattle. Closing the door carefully after him, Rogalski told that he made his way around the fields to watch the fire.

Phillip VanVossen, another farmer in the vicinity, seeing the Miller fire, hurried across the farm of Joseph P. Canby & Sons to the scene of the blaze. While crossing a field at the Canby farm Van Vossen noticed a man standing watching the fire from the distance. Last night van Vossen identified Rogalski as the watcher of the fire from the Canby property.

Asked why he committed the deeds Rogalski was at a loss to give any definite information, stating he had no special motive.

Farmers in the section have for the past few weeks feared that the pyromaniac would visit their places, and close watch has been kept on the out-buildings at many of the farms.

Whatawalloper That Wilson!

By HARDIN BURNLEY

"HACK" WILSON --
HOME RUN KING OF THE
MAJORS WHO SHOULD BE
RUTH'S CHIEF RIVAL IN 1931!

FOR the fifth season in succession, the mighty "Hack" Wilson drove in more than 100 runs for the Chicago Cubs during 1930. His wallopers accounted for 190 scores last year, which established a new record. He did not lead the National League with a .356 average, but the slugging percentages, recently compiled, showed this stocky stickman topping all major leaguers with .723. All this, in addition to Wilson's most signal 1930 claim to fame, when, with 56, he came within four of equalling "Babe" Ruth's immortal record of 60 home runs for a season. During 1930, the heroic

"Hack" went to bat 585 times and hit safely 208 times for a total of 423 bases. That gave him a slugging percentage 36 points higher than his nearest rival, the redoubtable "Chuck" Klein, of the Phillies, who was 9 points better than battering "Babe" Herman, of the Robins. Incidentally, Wilson was walked 105 times and struck out on 84 occasions last year, a top figure in each detail. This excellent showing, possibly a climax to four other hard hitting seasons, is all the more significant in that it plainly reveals Wilson's great fighting heart. He lost some critical drives in the sun when the Athletics humbled the Cubs during the 1929 World Series and was exposed to a fearful razzing thereby. But did "Hack" lose heart? Did Primo Camera leave anything but his old shoes (for the dog show) at Madison Square Garden? "Hack" isn't built that way. He went out last Spring and from the start had his best season thus far. Has his success swelled Wilson? Well, he tells his fire house pal back home in West Virginia that Ruth is undoubtedly the greatest home run hitter of all time. That's the kind of a sportsman, the rugged Mr. Wilson is. May he have even a better season in 1931! Copyright, 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Lucille might have worn such. It is expected that she will be returned to Bristol today.

Lessons had been somewhat neglected of late on the part of the seventh grade pupil, the teachers remarked today. It is presumed that Lucille was rather tired of school. She was frequently known to don her father's clothing, and play about the place at boys' games.

During Girls' Week last May, Lucille won awards for securing first place in the broad jump and relay race in Class A.
